Verif-Eye - Commercial Overload
Automated overage detection specially designed for commercial waste collection.

The Challenges

Overloaded commercial bins present several challenges for haulers, including environmental concerns, safety issues, operational inefficiencies, and increased disposal costs.

Overflowing contents are unsightly and run the risk of unintentionally contaminating the community and its resources. Drivers put themselves and others in harm's way when exiting the vehicle to manage an overloaded container. These measures also cause delays and excess collection volumes, affecting your bottom line.

Servicing overloaded containers without documenting the process and engaging your customer means keeping your drivers and the community at risk, adding time to an already tight route schedule, and missing out on billable revenue.

The Solution

Commercial overages can be costly to any fleet. The Verif-Eye® Commercial Overload service by 3rd Eye® digital allows haulers to automatically identify overloaded containers and other exceptions for immediate action.

With Overload service, commercial fleets can accurately detect and document each overloaded bin and associate the collection event with a customer without requiring the driver to manually capture photos or note the exception. When engaging customers who overfill their bins, photo and video of their violation can be used to educate them and/or validate additional fees pursuant to their contracts.

For customers who routinely exceed the volume of their containers, documented proof makes increased service conversations much easier. The resulting outcome is improved customer compliance with container volume guidelines, ultimately reducing environmental risk, increasing safety, and keeping routes on schedule.

The Verif-Eye Commercial Overload service helps you promote a cleaner, safer community while increasing route efficiency and recovering the cost of excess refuse collection.
